TN Voices (also known as Tennessee Voices for Children) is proud to reveal our new look. We still have the same promise, to advocate for the families of TN and deliver excellent support to our constituents. The motivation for this change is to remove barriers, treat the whole family, and fill gaps for those with mental health needs whenever possible.

TN Voices has been serving children, families, and transition age youth, as well as adults and caregivers for over 30 years. As we grow we recognize the importance of expanding our brand to be inclusive of the adults we already serve as well as those in the future who need our advocacy services.

Our new mission is to be the collaborative leader guiding mental health transformation. We want to build hope for all generations as we seek to provide solutions that promote access to support for those in need.

A special thanks to GS&F of Nashville for their commitment and support in helping TN Voices put our best look forward with the new branding.

Sincerely,

Tennessee Head Start Association’s Spring Conference

Kelli Celsor and Victoria Finch presented on behalf of TN Voices Early Childhood Program at the annual Tennessee Head Start Association’s spring conference. This year’s forum was held March 3-5 at the Music Road Resort Convention Center, which overlooks the picturesque smoky mountains of Pigeon Forge, TN. Head Start teachers, directors, and staff joined for 3 days to dive deep into the theme: “20/20 Vision: Sharpen Your Focus,” which explored topics on children’s mental and emotional well-being as well as leading best practices in education. Celsor and Finch led two sessions during the event. The first session explored building resilience in early childhood classrooms and examined evidence-based practices early childhood educators can use to support young children’s positive mental health. The second session was a workshop on how to write scripted stories to address challenging behaviors.

Keynote speakers at the conference included former Nashville mayor, Megan Barry, who spoke of her current efforts to raise awareness for mental health issues in the state, and author and advocate for emotionally intelligent leadership, Holly Elissa Bruno, who debuted her new memoir on overcoming childhood trauma. The conference was a perfect opportunity for collaboration and reflection, as well as a chance for educators and staff to get in touch with local service providers in their communities! An extended thanks to Belva Weathersby, Head Start Collaboration Director, for such a wonderfully engaging and hospitable event. We look forward to next year!

Mental health challenges are real and treatable. And we’re here to help.
The Tennessee Commission on Children and Youth hosted Children’s Advocacy Days (CAD) on March 10-11, 2020 at the War Memorial Auditorium in Nashville, TN.

This year’s conference focused on moving ideas to action through a series of Compelling Conversations. The conversations included current and relevant topics critical to the goals and mission of all child advocates. Participants enjoyed inside access to conversations among national, state, and local experts as they examined ideas that work and how to replicate them.

After over 30 years of history, CAD continues to be an opportunity for children’s advocates, service providers, and others to come together to be inspired by speakers, leaders and peers. Commissioner Marie Williams from the TN Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services spoke at the event on new funds in Governor Lee’s budget for mental health and the importance of legislative advocacy and improving the lives of children in Tennessee.

Several TNV staff attended the conference and met with their legislatures afterwards to discuss important legislation in regards to mental health in Tennessee.
